

The good fight

I'm Possible Project launch, Design A Space

LIKE you probably, we have quotes from people smarter and more successful – you know, Edward de Bono, Rocky Balboa (yes, we know that's not a real person) – stuck to our desk for times when things seem a bit bleak. Recently we added another, attributed to Audrey Hepburn, "Nothing is impossible, the word itself says, 'I'm possible'." The next day we were invited to the launch of the I'm Possible project, aimed at raising money for Suicide Line Victoria.

On Thursday night at Design A Space in Chapel Street Chris Lutz showcased T-shirts created by nine young designers, among them Maurice Golotta and Alex Zhadan, tasked with transforming the word "Impossible" to "I'm possible".

How did this get started, we wondered. "I was sketching away in my pad, when I should have been concentrating in class," Golotta smiled. "How could we do something creative and still community based?" And so it began.

What seems impossible in your life that you're fighting to make possible? "My gut," Golotta laughed. What about it? "It's protruding." And you're trying to make it concave. "Exactly."

We're adding another quote to our desk, from the greatest fighter of all – Muhammad Ali: "Impossible is not a fact. It's an opinion . . . Impossible is nothing."

Chris Lutz and Chloe Williams
at the I'm Possible project
launch at Design
A Space on Chapel Street.

Beam a little beam:
Bec Lutz and Maurice Golotta at the I'm Possible
project launch at
Design A Space.